A breath of fresh air.

What makes Cavan a good place for business? The short answer - great people in a wonderful location. This is a people-place and a can-do place.

Quality of life is off-the-charts good here. You can actually hear yourself think in Cavan, and that's a good thing for a growing business.

This is a growing destination for tourism with many amenities and services that enhance the lifestyle of everyone. We have hundreds of lakes to enjoy, beautiful upland hikes, Stone Age sites to visit and an exciting roster of festivals and cultural events.

Our reputation for quality foods is reinforced by our nationally recognised restaurants and growing speciality food industry who showcase their wares at the annual 'Taste of Cavan' food festival.

Growing a business here isn't just shrewd, it can actually be fun.

In the middle of it all.

Cavan is a connected place open to the World.

Here in Cavan, business enjoys one of the lowest local authority rates in the country and commercial rental prices are very competitive. The last decade has seen incredible work on infrastructure. Today Ireland is more connected than ever before and Cavan is in the middle of it all.

We have the space - from serviced business parks to high tech office accommodation. We can provide a perfect blank canvas for a major business; a strategic hub for companies with a focus on the huge European markets close by.

We are an inland county blessed with good neighbours all the way round. We share a fluid international border with Fermanagh [Northern Ireland] and while our county lines mean a lot on the sports field on Sunday, our borders fade away on Monday morning and we do business together as usual (although the drive to work is better when we win).

Old farms, new farms and more.

Agriculture has traditionally been Cavan's largest industry. Lakeland Dairies, one of Ireland's largest dairy co-ops, has processing facilities across the county. Glanbia is here alongside meat processors like Liffey Meats and McCarren Meats.

A new farming industry is on the rise here – wind farming – and Cavan now has a fine crop of turbines and one of the largest capacities of any inland county in Ireland.

High speed broadband and other infrastructural improvements mean our capacity for business is greater than ever. Home-grown and international businesses enjoy a friendly business environment in a strategic location. Manufacturing, building materials, engineering and food processing industries live happily alongside our farming and tourism industries. Our active business development community makes sure that new investment can find a happy, productive home here in Cavan.

Use your contacts to create jobs in CAVAN

With so many Irish living abroad, the potential to spread the word that Cavan is open for business has never been greater. Reach out to your network living abroad and ask if they know of a company considering international expansion. If they do, put them in touch with ConnectIreland and you could earn a cash reward per job created. Who knows, maybe a successful introduction could result in a family member or friend returning to Ireland.

ConnectIreland delivers the Succeed in Ireland initiative, a government-backed programme, in partnership with IDA Ireland. This initiative is an incentivised referral scheme aimed at creating jobs in Ireland. It's based on the simple idea of using your connections to help create real, sustainable jobs.

How to play your part

Log on to www.connectireland.com and register as a connector. Help introduce expanding companies to Ireland and earn a reward up to €1,500 per job created [max 100 jobs].
